Postponing Federal Elections and the Covid-19 Pandemic; Legal Considerations https://crsreports.congress.gov/product/pdf/LSB/LSB10425/3	There is nothing in the Constitution about what to do if an emergency arises during Presidential elections. A complicated web of government offices, state, Congress and the courts, including the Supreme Court, may be involved with the only stipulation being that the President is in office until January 20.
Covid-19: Cybercrime Opportunities and Law Enforcement Response https://crsreports.congress.gov/product/pdf/IN/IN11257/2	Countering cyber threats is among DOJ's (Department of Justice) top priorities, and countering threats related to the COVID-19 pandemic is receiving heightened attention.
Guidelines Opening Up America Again https://permanent.fdlp.gov/gpo136110/Guidelines-for-Opening-Up-America-Again.pdf	From the Office of the President. Phase 1, Phase 2, and Phase 3 outlined.
"Space Force" and Related DOD Issues for Congress https://crsreports.congress.gov/product/pdf/IF/IF11172/2	Congress has expressed concern over the slow pace with which DOD and the Air Force have addressed the growing threat to U.S. national security in space from adversaries, particularly Russia and China, and, to a lesser extent, North Korea and Iran. This is because, in their view, the space domain has evolved into a war-fighting domain like air, land, and sea and that is both congested and contested.

Congressional Lawmaking: A Perspective on Secrecy and Transparency

Secrecy is an ever-present part of much legislative policymaking; however, secrecy and transparency are not “either/or” constructs. They overlap constantly during the various policymaking stages. The objectives of this report are four-fold:

- first, to outline briefly the historical and inherent tension between secrecy and transparency in the congressional process;
- second, to review several common and recurring secrecy/transparency issues that emerged again with the 2011 formation of the Joint Select Deficit Reduction Committee;
- third, to identify various lawmaking stages typically imbued with closed door activities; and
- fourth, to close with several summary observations. This report will not be updated.
